Canadian Penitentiary Service. Prison for Women. -- 1960-1988. -- 6cm.

The construction of the first federal prison for women in Canada, between 1925 and 1934, was based on the design of a nineteenth century male maximum-security prison.

Macneill was appointed warden of the Prison for Women in 1960 and was the first female warden in Canada. She made a huge impact on prison living conditions and started a programme of classification, segregating first-time offenders from dangerous long-term criminals. Rehabilitation programmes were instituted, with educational opportunities and appropriate psychiatric care. Includes her activities with the Joint Commission on Correctional Manpower and Training and plans for a new prison for women. -- Title based on letterhead stationery and content of series. -- File list available. -- Associated material: National Archives of Canada, Solicitor General's Office Records. -- Related material: See Sub-series 1.1 - Correspondence and Series 5 - Penal reform and rights of prisoners.

Series 5 - Penal reform and rights of prisoners

Penal reform and rights of prisoners [textual records and sound recordings]. -- 1950s-1980s. -- 21 cm.

Because of her exposure to the penitentiary service and the treatment of young offenders, female offenders and drug addiction, Macneill became an advocate for penal reform and prisoner's rights.

Advocacy included the following activities: writing of reports, commentaries and letters to officials and journalists, presenting addresses to John Howard Societies, Elizabeth Fry groups and University Women's Clubs and serving as a witness or being available to provide statements to official bodies such as the House of Commons or USA Congress.

Series consists of textual records (correspondence, reports, notes, addresses and newspaper clippings) concerning penal reform and prisoners' rights. Includes: Department of Reform Institution of Ontario: Brief Inquiry, March 1956; A Plan for the Treatment of Young Offenders; and legislation for Canada, United Kingdom and the United States. -- Title based on content of Series. -- File list available. -- Associated material: Dept. of Reform Institutions (AO, RG20) [Archives of Ontario, 77 Grenville St., Unit 300, Toronto, ON., M5S 1B3]. -- Related material: See Sub-series 1.1 - Correspondence.

Series 6 - Maisie Clark

Maisie Clark. -- 1986-1988. -- 7 cm.

Maisie Irene Clark, born Yorkshire ca. 1922; married Peter Clark, RAF, and after the war they emigrated to Canada. In 1980 Maisie was sentenced to ten years in the Prison for Women for second-degree murder. While in prison, Maisie contracted Tuberculosis and her general spirits deteriorated. Concerned friends contacted June Callwood, journalist with the Toronto Globe and Mail, and Isabel Macneill to look into the case and help release Maisie. By 1986 Flora MacDonald, MP for Kingston, was also involved in advocacy to get her released. Maisie was granted a conditional pardon in 1987. During this time, CTV programme W5 produced a documentary on the use of the Prerogative of Mercy and Maisie's case was used as an example. Unfortunately, the W5 programme turned out to be harmful to the case, portraying a false political picture of events and of the advocacy activities to free Maisie.

Series consists of correspondence, transcripts of W5 programme, official documents and newspaper clippings. Correspondence includes letters from Callwood, MPs Coline Campbell and Flora MacDonald, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, etc. -- Title based on contents of series. -- File list available. -- Associated material: National Archives of Canada, June Callwood fonds, Flora MacDonald fonds, Solicitor General's Office Records; and Carol Ashurst, CTV Television Network Ltd., 250 Yonge Street, Suite 1800, Toronto, Ontario, M5B 2N8. -- Related material: See Sub-series 1.1 - Correspondence.

Canadian Penitentiary Service. Prison for Women. -- 1960-1988. -- 6cm.

The construction of the first federal prison for women in Canada, between 1925 and 1934, was based on the design of a nineteenth century male maximum-security prison.

Macneill was appointed warden of the Prison for Women in 1960 and was the first female warden in Canada. She made a huge impact on prison living conditions and started a programme of classification segregating first-time offenders from dangerous long-term criminals. Rehabilitation programmes were instituted, with educational opportunities and appropriate psychiatric care. Series consists of textual records (correspondence, administrative records, reports, draft history, scrapbook, and newspaper clippings) and one photograph. Penal reform and rights of prisoners [textual records and sound recordings]. -- 1950s-1980s. -- 21 cm.

Advocacy included the following activities: writing of reports, commentaries and letters to officials and journalists, presenting addresses to John Howard Societies, Elizabeth Fry groups and University Women's Clubs and serving as a witness or being available to provide statements to official bodies such as the House of Commons or USA Congress.

Series 6 - Maisie Clark

Maisie Clark. -- 1986-1988. -- 7 cm.

Maisie Irene Clark, born Yorkshire ca. 1922; married Peter Clark, RAF, and after the war they emigrated to Canada. In 1980 Maisie was sentenced to ten years in the Prison for Women for second-degree murder. While in prison, Maisie contracted Tuberculosis and her general spirits deteriorated. Concerned friends contacted June Callwood, journalist with the Toronto Globe and Mail, and Isabel Macneill to look into the case and help release Maisie. By 1986 Flora MacDonald, MP for Kingston, was also involved in advocacy to get her released. Maisie was granted a conditional pardon in 1987. During this time, CTV programme W5 produced a documentary on the use of the Prerogative of Mercy and Maisie's case was used as an example. Unfortunately, the W5 programme turned out to be harmful to the case, portraying a false political picture of events and of the advocacy activities to free Maisie.

Correspondence includes letters from Callwood, MPs Coline Campbell and Flora MacDonald, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, etc. -- Title based on contents of series. -- File list available. -- Associated material: National Archives of Canada, June Callwood fonds, Flora MacDonald fonds, Solicitor General's Office Records; and Carol Ashurst, CTV Television Network Ltd., 250 Yonge Street, Suite 1800, Toronto, Ontario, M5B 2N8. -- Related material: See Sub-series 1.1 - Correspondence.
