At Liverpool, Nova Scotia

These chanties were all sung on ships sailing out of Liverpool; ships on which Mr. Smith sailed himself, and this is the way he sang them.

Singer of 1,2&4; Mr. William Smith who first went to sea as a lad on a fishing schooner (local); then sailed on square riggers to the West Indies; sailed on coasting vessels off Nova Saotia and the United States coast; was in wrecking business when he became a diver for Ned Gable; went rigging at Liverpool and helped to rig the last square riggerdone in Liverpool; was a sail maker in a sail loft, and later became a farmer. (Most Sishermen do a small amount of farming). His son has written a book of his memoirs which he is going to publish privately. Mr. Smith sailed latterly as mate.

Singerof 3: Thomas H.Raddall, author; Liverpool; middle forties; sailed on vessels run by steam, but with men who remembered the days of sail and chanties. This was sung more as a help to Mr. Smith than anything, but is a good authentic rendering of the chanty as sung by square rigged sailors.
