John A. Munro

Come all my fellow citizens,
With pity lend an ear,
Of a sad and a mournful story
You presentlie shall hear,
Concerning a young damsel
Who in Charlottetown did dwell,
She was handsome, neathand innocent,
The truth to you I'll tell.

The first time that I saw Miss Vail
'Twaspn a picnic day,
We were introduced and pleasantly
We passed the time away,
She noth knowing I was married,
And trusting me also,
't's little did she ever think
I would prove heroverthrow.

Likewise five hundred dollars

She trusted to my care,

For she said there wasno one breathing
With me she could compare,

At a boarding house called Lordly's

She bok up her abode,

And it was from there I asked her out

To the Black River road.

We left the cold shed bunkers
And hurried on with speed,
Until we arrived unto the spot
Where I meant for to do the deed,
We stepped aside just off the road
And sot down on a stone,
Looking all around from every side
I found we were alone.

The child it then began to cry
Which made my anger rise,
I quickly caught it by the throat
All forto stop its cries,
The mother arose to save her child
But I had choked it dead,
And with a loaded pistol
I shot her through the head.

Now after I had done the deed
My courage could not prevail,
With mop andbrush I covered them
And left them to decay,
And straight into the city
I quickly made my way.

A year had passed and better,
And the time did quickly fly,
Some colored folks a-berrying
A human skull did spy,

then

The news they area did spread abroad And rumors soon went round, And many went to view the spot Where human bones were found.

Likewise the crowner(coroner) of St. John
To analyse the case,
Likewise the crowner of St. John
To analyse the case,
Suspicion soon then fell on me
And I was sent to jail,
There I lay in troubledmind
Until my trial day.

Till the judge he passed my sentence
And this to me did say,
On the fifteenth day of February
You by the necks be hung,
May God have mercy on your soul
For the dreadful deed you've done.

On the fifteenth day of February
I takemy last farewell,
Of all my old companions
Who in this town do dwell,
Likewise my loving helpmate
And her two children small,
When I think of parting with them
It grieves me the worst of all.

So it's come all my fellow citizens,
A warning take by me,
See that you quit night walking
And shun bad company,
For if you would but think on what I've got to undergo
You would shun the fate before too late
Of the St. John A. Munro.

Sung by Mr. J.W.Collier, Elgin, N.B. and recorded by Helen Creighton, Sept. 1954.

This happened on the Black River Road near St. John, on theeast. The singer says crowner for coroner.

My name 'tis Peter Emberley as you may understand,
I belong to Prince Edward's Island near to the ocean strand,
In eighteen hundred and eight when the flowers in brilliant hue
I left my native counteree my fortune to pursue.

I landed in New Branswick, that lumbering counteree,
I hired to workin the lumber woods which proved my destiny,
I hired to work in the lumber woods to cut the spruce trees down,
It was loading two sleds on the yards I received my deathly wound.

Now there's dangeron the ocean where the seas rolls mountains high, There's dangerin the battlefield where the angry bullets fly, There's danger in the lumber woods and death lucks silently there, And I have proved a victim to death's great monstrous snare.

Here's adieu unto Prince Edward's Isle, that garden in the sea, No more I'll walk her flowery banks to enjoy a summer breeze, Nomore I'll view her galliant ships as they go sailing by, With her streamers floating in the wind above, her canvas high.

Here's adieu unto my father, 'twas him who drove me here,

W think him very cruel, his treatment most severe,

It is not right to press a boy nor try to keep him down,

For it ofttimes drives him from his home when he is far too young.

Here's adieu unto my greater friend, I mean my mother dear, She reared a son that fell as soon as he left her tender care, It's little did my mother think when she sang lullobies It's what land I might travel in or what death I might die.

Here's afficu unto my younger friend and the island girl so true, Long may they live to enjoy that isle where I my first breath drew, But the time will pass on just as fast as before I passed away, What signifie a mortal man that organized for clay.

Now there is a world beyonf thetomb, to it I'm nearing on, For man is more than mortal and death can ever come, The mist of death does blind my eyes and I'm no longer here, My spirit takes its final flight, so now I must leave here.

But I hope my heavenly father will bless my   grave, It's to near the city of Boistown where my mouldering bones do lie, To wait my Savoir's calling on the great judgement day.

Sung by Mr. J.W.Collier, Elgin, N.B. and recorded by Helen Creighton, Sept. 1954

Adieu unto Prince Edward Isle and that garden in the sea,
No more I'll walk her flowery banks to enjoy the summer breeze,
No more Iill view those lofty ships as they do go sailing by,
Wuth streamers floating in the air bove their canvas high.
Sung by Mr. Wm. E. Ireland, Elgin, N. B. for his tune.

Said old man Higgingsto Mary Ann, "If you marry Sam
I'll give you six acres of good working land, Six sheep and a cow and a good breeding mare, Now faith, " said old Higgins, "And I think that's pretty fair. "

Sung by Mr. Wm.E. Ireland, Elgin, N.B. and recorded by Helen Creighton, Sept. 1954.

This was sung to him by his uncle Dan when he was a small boy and was made up here.

The bright moon was shining the night that we parted,
I held you and kissed you and called you my wwn,
In words sweet and tender you said that you'd love me,
You said you'd return when the rose is in bloom.
Cho.

Roses are blooming, come back to me darling, Come back to me darling and never more roam, Robins are singing, church bells are ringing, Roses are blooming, so come back my own.

The days have been long dear, the nights have been lonely, I missed you my darling since you went away, Still keep hoping that you will remember, That you will remember and come back some day. Cho.

Sung by Mr. J.W.Collier, Elgin, N.B. and recorded by Helen Creighton, Sept. 1954.

If you can say that she stole you That will prevent a fury, And this is law will maintain Before the judge and jury.

My father's a lawyer of the peace And I'm his only daughter.

You might have lords and nobles of high birth And rich descended,
But sineeyou we had your heart's delight How can I be offended?

For a guinea he will council you, That will prevent a fury, And this is law I will maintain Before the judge and jury.

Very jumbled, but evidently part of a very old song, sung by Mr. Angelo Dornan, Elgin, N.B. and recorded by Helen Creighton, Sept. 1954.

Betsy was a waiting-maid Lately came down from Belvedere, A waiting-maid she was bound to be, Better fitted for some high degree.

Her mistress had one only son Whom Betsy placed her hopes upon, His dark blue eyes and curly hair Placed Betsy's heart within a snare.

One evening, evelning, one evening fair He said to Betsy, "I love you dear, I love you dear as I do my life, do intend to make you my wife."

His mother being in the next room And overhearing what her son did say, Was resolved for to change his mind And for to break up all love's design.

Early next morn his mother arose
Saying, "Betsy, Betsy put on your clothes,
To London city you now must go
To wait on me for a day or so.

Miss Betsy dressed in a rich awray And with her mistress went away, A ship has anchored in the sound, To London city now Betsy's bound.

His mother returned in a few days
And found her son standing in the door,
"You are welcome home dear mother," he said,
"But where is Betsy the waiting maid?"

"O Betsy's gone far o'er the main,
Far o'er the sea there to remain,
I would see you dead and in your grave
Than to marry Betsy the waiting maid."

Her soon took sick and very bad,
No songs of music could make him glad,
In raving dreams he would loudly cry,
Oh Betsy, Betsy, for you I'll die."

Now when she saw that her son was dead
She wrung herhands and these words she said,
"O could I see my son breathe again
I would send for Betsy far o'er the main."

Now all you old folk a warning take,
Never slight your children for riches sake,
For gold will melt and silver too
But constant lovers will prove true.
For gold will melt and silver fly
But constant love will never die.

Sung by Mr. Wm.E. Ireland, Elgin, N.B. and recorded by Helen Creighton, Sept. 1954.

Come all you bold and ? commanders
O'er the foaming billows cruise,
For my sad fate pray taken warning
All poor seamen don't abuse.

Richard Perry was my servant,
A tall and a handsome man was he,
His mother did him apprentice bind
With me to cross the raging sea.

"Oh Captain James my boy is murdered,
And I am in a distressed state,
Oh Captain James my boy you've murdered
And on the gibbets will be your fate."

Soon I'll sufferon the gallows
For this awful deed I've done,
You seamen all pray take a warning,
My example I hope you'll shun.

Sungby Mr. Wm.E. Ireland, Elgin, N.B. and recorded by Helen Creighton, Sept. 1954.

For other words see reels 54 and 134

Ladies and gentlemen, I am a plain and modest man. I was born at a very early period of my existence. I have struggled from the obscurity to which an unlucky star had doomed me, till I have bisen like a bright exhalation in the eventide of life to the very summit of human greatness and grandeur.

But who can control their fate? There is a divinity that shapes our ends, rough-hew them how we will. I was intended by nature for a great statesman. Had I of lived in the days of Hannibal I should surely have beaten the great Carthagenian general in crossing the Alps, and it is a dead sure and certain thing that I could outdistance Halo(?) in crossing the isthmus. All the world loves a hero. When Jack Shepperd with atkary laid the corner-stone of Central Park with a pickas in one hand and a thousand of brick in the other, and when Kit Carson driv his apple cart over the Alps, on his way to the sycamore grovesof Jesusalem, all the wide world from the tops of the bushy-tailed mountains to the extreme extremities of the river were singing his praises.

Yes, the eyes of all mankind, and the eyes of all womenkind, and women who were not kind were talking about him. "Oh hear, hear, " the women say no see.
